

Proposal

Why are some countries failing to control the Covid epidemic?

Let's take a look at what the countries that are doing very well are doing.

1 Enclosure of cities and forced quarantines

2 Making people obey the government's advice to fight the epidemic

3 Technology can be used effectively.

That means the government can be more efficient in dealing with the Covid epidemic.

Why do some governments fail to deal with problems efficiently?

Because some governments don't have much power.

Why is that happening?

Because their institutions are biased towards democracy.

So why can't we have a system that is democratic and has enough authority to deal with the epidemic?

That's what this proposal is talking about!

First, there must be a ranking for human rights.

The right to life has to be the first. If you die, you really don't have any human rights.

Wouldn't it be better to wait six months to get the rest of the decades of happiness? If you die of illness now, decades of happiness will be gone.

This outbreak has seriously threatened the right to life of people all over the world.

If some people do not know the danger and seriousness of the coronavirus as children, the government(mother) should educate them without harming their lives. Some children will grow up and thank their mother for saving their lives.

Now let's look at the specific methods. The strategy is to get more opposition to join our anti-epidemic campaign.

Let's start by discussing ways to push forward with closures and enforced quarantines.

The corresponding human right is freedom of assembly.

My suggestion is to have the opposition rally in the online simulation world and have one player for each person protesting.

The confrontation between the anti-epidemic camp and the opposition in the simulated world can be propagated through real-world media.

But there must be no rallies offline for a while (please).

Let's discuss ways to get people to obey the government's advice.

The corresponding human right is freedom of opinion and expression.

"It is important to know words can kill, so be careful when you are using them"

People must take responsibility for what they say.

My suggestion is to set up a rebuttal website and related organizations and announce the day before that any remarks against the anti-epidemic will be posted under their real names and profile. They will then be judged and rebutted on the website by the government agencies and people.

If the anti-epidemic argument is too good for the government to refute, the government can improve, but the argument that the state has certified as unfavorable to the situation at the time can be used in the history textbook.

	Doctor Pikachu	We should wear mask because it prevents virus.	Upvote 13480	Downvote 30	Correct by GOV on 15/4/2020

Hope more opposition can become sensible (please).

Now let's talk about ways to make technology work more efficiently.

The corresponding human right is the right to respect your private and family life.

People who actively resist the government's fight against the epidemic will have their rights and benefits gradually reduced and will eventually be classified as terrorists because they threaten the country's economy and people's security.

Hope more opposition will join the anti- Covid epidemic campaign(please).
